	 practice health promotion with groups (including families) and communities as client engage in processes, while working collaboratively, that facilitate health promotion and empowerment become involved in processes such as community organizing, community development, program development, and advocacy
N:	Course Content [Overview]
	In Nursing Practice VI, participants focus on clients' experiences with health promotion and community empowerment. This course includes nursing practice experience and praxis seminars. Nursing practice experience involves work with families, groups, communities and/or populations.
	In praxis seminars, participants address concepts from semester courses, such as:
	 community development health promotion evidence-based practice community from a socio-environmental perspective community as client (capacity, resourcefulness, empowerment) emancipatory education population health program planning marginalization/disenfranchisement primary health relationship between research, practice, and theory recognition of legitimate knowledge world views conflict relational practice group process
0:	Methods of Instruction [Learning Process] In this course, participants learn about professional nursing practice, critical thinking, and critical reflection. Practice experiences are supported by seminars, which provide opportunities to examine theories and concepts for discussion, exploration, and integration. Praxis involves the examination of the dynamic interplay between theory and practice. Praxis is actualized by critical reflection, journaling, and active participation in nursing practice seminars. Participants also explore the role of the nurse in relation to the promotion of health and healing.Participants may work in areas of personal interest with a group (may include a family), agency, or population of their choice. This may occur in settings that may or may not have health/health care as the primary mandate Participants design an evolving learning contract with the community contact, outlining their commitment for participation during the practice experience.

Q: Means of Assessment

Course evaluation is consistent with Douglas College Curriculum Development and Approval Policy. An evaluation schedule is presented at the beginning of the course. Respect for individual choice and an openness to negotiation guide decisions about methods of evaluation.

An appraisal form is used that encompasses the five domains of nursing practice (health and healing, teaching/learning, decision making for nursing practice, professional responsibility, collaborative leadership), competencies, and quality indicators. Quality indicators incorporate the minimal semester requirements and address what participants should know, be, and do by the end of the semester. Nursing practice congruent with the quality indicators is an essential component of successful completion of this course.

This is a mastery course.
